TRACING THE ORIGIN OF TANGOLA

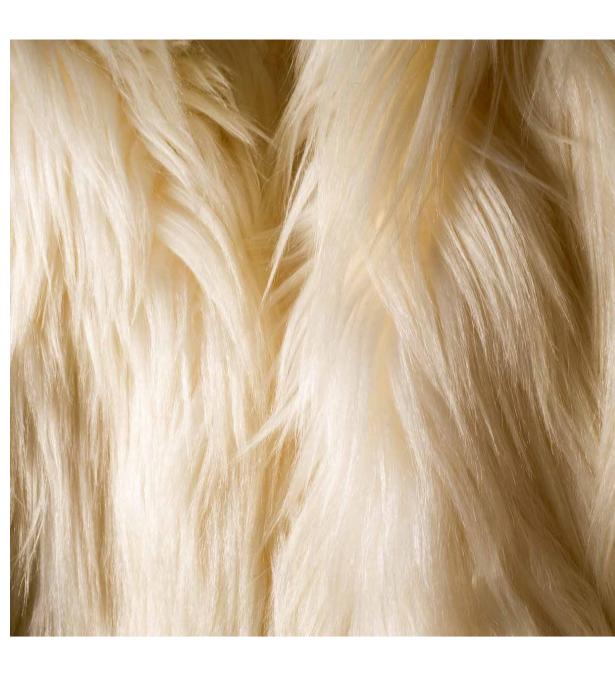

Nestled above 4,500 meters on the Tibetan Plateau lies one of nature's most precious treasures—yak. This natural fiber, originating from the snow-covered highlands, epitomizes Earth's purest form of luxury. TANGOLA, named to honor and protect these vanishing pristine snowfields, serves as an ambassador of the Himalayas and represents a warm gift from the generous Tibetan Plateau.

In Tibetan, yaks are reverently called "Nor," symbolizing endless wealth and cherished treasures. Yaks are not only the guardians of life for the Tibetan people but also a symbol of the harmonious coexistence between the human spirit and nature. Each semi-wild yak is cared for with deep affection by herders and provides rare and valuable raw yak. Collected gently by hand, the silky yak underscores its extraordinary value because of its limited annual yield, making it a coveted element in luxury goods and high-end fashion.

For thirty years, TANGOLA has been rooted in Xining, Qinghai, forging an unbreakable bond with the herders by purchasing up to 800 tons of raw yak annually.

We meticulously categorize each batch of raw yak to ensure every fiber traces back to its pure origin with consistent excellence. Their GOTS-certified wool washing facilities employ advanced techniques to delicately preserve the natural essence of yak, allowing each product to exude a breath of nature. Additionally, TANGOLA's refined combing technology efficiently separates and grades yak, catering to diverse tastes.

TANGOLA strives for excellence in commerce and ecological conservation. By establishing wildlife rescue stations, it fulfills its corporate responsibility for animal welfare by nurturing injured animals with yak milk until they recover. These stations rescue and treat injured wildlife and provide yak milk until they recover. Upholding the principles of drawing from and giving back to nature ensures a comfortable and happy environment for the animals at TANGOLA Ranch.

TANGOLA strives for a harmonious balance between humanity and nature and is dedicated to sustainable development.

They integrate humane management with natural ecosystems to promote semi-wild animal husbandry and aim to create a harmonious balance between humanity and nature. They believe that "Pure Me, Pure World" is the essence of their corporate culture and their most sincere promise and guardianship of this world. With TANGOLA, you will safeguard this pure land and journey toward a beautiful future.

Bathed in the light of the highlands, the 100% yak exudes luxurious elegance. Curated from unique breeds native to the Tibetan Plateau, TANGOLA's artful dyeing techniques blend seven to eight colors, creating layers of rich hues that radiate sophistication. It dazzles like fur, shining uniquely under every beam of light. The exceptional elasticity of yak hair not only provides warmth but also endows it with strong anti-pilling properties, making it an excellent choice for durable wear.
